

Hossein Alizadeh is the Middle East and North Africa Regional Program Coordinator for the International Gay and Lesbian Human Rights Commission (IGLHRC). IGLHRC is the only US-based non-governmental organization that focuses exclusively on the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender individuals with consultative status at the United Nations. Mr. Alizadeh works closely with LGBT activists and groups in Iran and throughout the region to support their struggle for full legal equality and their work to end discrimination and violence based on sexuality and gender.

Mr. Alizadeh has written a number of articles on the situation of LGBT people in Iran, testified before the United Nations, and has supervised the publication of five reports to educate allies and inform LGBT community members of their rights in Iran. Over the past 15 years, he has worked with a number of academic and research centers, faith-based groups, civil society organizations, and human rights advocacy institutions to promote cross-cultural understanding and to support the civil and human rights movement in Iran and the broader Middle East. Mr. Alizadeh has an M.A. in International Relations from the National University, Teheran, Iran and an M.A in International Peace Studies from the University of Notre Dame.
